A summer's day in Islington, full of the mournful wail of antique-restoring machinery. Fenchurch was unavoidably busy for the afternoon, so Arthur wandered in a blissed-out haze and looked at all the shops which, in Islington, are quite an useful bunch, as anyone who regularly needs old woodworking tools, Boer War helmets, drag, of fice furniture or fish will readily confirm. The sun beat down over the roofgardens. It beat on architects and plumbers. It beat on barristers and burglars. It beat on pizzas. It beat on estate agent's particulars. It beat on Arthur as he went into a restored furniture shop. "It's an interesting building," said the proprietor, cheerfully. "There's a cellar with a secret passage which connects with a nearby pub. It was built for the Prince Regent apparently, so he could make his escape when he needed to." "You mean, in case anybody might catch him buying stripped pine furniture," said Arthur "No," said the proprietor, "not for that reason." "You'll have to excuse me," said Arthur. "I'm terribly happy." "I see." He wandered hazily on and found himself outside the of fices of Greenpeace. he remembered the contents of his file marked "Things to do - urgent!", which he hadn't opened again in the meantime. He marched in with a cheery smile and said he'd come to give them some money to help free the dolphins. "Very funny," they told him, "go away."
