If there's one thing we look forward to the most, it's reintroducing a legend back to the breakbeat community. If you were a part of the breaks scene back in the mid 2000's you'll undoubtedly remember spinning or dancing to Dopamine's hit Hold You (not to brag, but winner of the 2006 Breakspoll Best Single award). After exploring some other electronica genres for a few years, Dopamine is back with a brand new breakbeat offering aptly titled Homecoming. Clocking in at just over seven minutes, Homecoming is a return to a bygone era of breaks where the producer could take his time building and layering percussion and synth elements as the dancefloor is transported along for the ride. Welcome home Dopamine!
