DOWNBEAT 016

From the producer who brought us the massive track, USAnus. We are proud to present the brand new single from the man known as Mr. Psik.

A: Mr. Psik – Jam

A Steel drum played intro that ends off just to start the body into some massive double drop action, this intro is designed to cause movement with no downtime. This is a big, aggressive, thumping, raw in your face type of track with lots of drive. Many elements play off one another in the drums, showing great production skill and thought. The bass line is always morphing and stomping along tying things together with pure unrelentless damage. Monstrous melodies, bass devastation and drive make this one hell of a stand out track with a sound all its own.

AA: Mr. Psik – WHYso

With our first dubstep-ish, abstract beat explosion at hand, it's safe to say that this one is setting the marker high. Starting off with a warm throbbing bassline, the tune continues into some moody elements before the toughness comes back in. The drums are setting the pace with their clanging sound as the organ get's played over top. Watch out though, this tune opens up large as the track lets the bass come rushing back in. Stomping bassline with a slew of drum edits, fills and chops, this one will have your full attention. Settling back down, you get a stabby, cut up affair before jumping back in killing it on the last half of the track while the drums go fuckin mental and all goes to hell.

Release Date: Jan 12th

Jam, the title is a reference to what I suppose you would call jelly. Which was a metaphor for girlfriend head fucking and period haha (I mean mentally not actually fucking her in the head, which,... I digress.)HAHA!
